Quick Review

Nonfiction books have helpful parts called text features. Captions, bold print, headings, and a glossary help you find facts fast.

PART 1 — READ

Read the passage. Then answer the questions.

Parts of a Nonfiction Book

A nonfiction book gives you real facts. It has special parts that help you read. These parts are called text features. They make it easier to find the facts you want. Smart readers learn how to use them.

A heading is a title that sits above a part of the page. It tells you what that part is about. Bold print is dark, thick text. It shows you an important word. A caption is a small line of words under a picture. It tells you what the picture shows.

A glossary is a list at the back of the book. It tells what hard words mean. An index is also at the back. It lists topics and the page numbers where you can find them. These features help you read faster and learn more.
