Explanations
1. C	Stories are organized into chapters.
2. B	Plays (dramas) are organized into acts and scenes.
3. C	Poems are organized into stanzas.
4. C	Characters' names followed by their spoken lines is dialogue in a drama.
5. C	Count the lines.
6. B	Later chapters build on the events of earlier chapters.
7. B	Stanzas group related ideas, like paragraphs in a story. A confuses stanzas with endings; C and D each describe other things some poems do, but they are not the reason for stanzas.
8. C	Narrator notes plus character dialogue make a scene from a drama.
9. C	Chapters are usually made of many paragraphs.
10.	Answer: stanza break / new stanza Stanzas are separated by spaces — students may answer “stanza break” or similar.
