Explanations

1. A	All four describe negative moods. Furious sits at the high end of the anger scale, so A ( very angry; enraged ) is the match. B is anger at a lower intensity (annoyed); C is a different feeling (surprise); D names a withdrawn mood, not furious.
2. D	Each option is a real personality word. Stingy = unwilling to share = the direct opposite of generous. A and C are positive traits (not opposites); B is mildly negative (careful) but not the true opposite of generous.
3. B	All four describe feelings, but only B is on the scared scale at high intensity. A and C are wrong feelings; D is on the right scale but too mild for a bear right behind you.
4. C	All four lists use the same kind of words. The true intensity order is cool < chilly < cold < freezing . A skips cool and starts too cold; B reverses the order; D scrambles it.
5. B	True intensity: glad < happy < delighted < ecstatic . A is reversed; C swaps glad and happy; D is scrambled.
6. D	All four hint at “newness.” Modern is the standard opposite of ancient (both describe time periods). Recent means a short time ago (not the time-period opposite); fresh usually describes food; young usually describes living things.
7. A	All four are real tired-words. Exhausted is the most intense — no energy left at all. Drowsy is about sleepiness, not effort; weary still has some energy left; fatigued is similar to tired but less extreme than exhausted.
8.	Answer: warm → hot → scorching All three describe heat at different intensities: warm is mild, hot is strong, and scorching means so hot it burns. A reversed list would put scorching first — wrong intensity order.
9. C	All four are sound-related. Silent is the strongest opposite of noisy and fits a library best. Quiet is close but milder; loud is a synonym (the trap); peaceful describes mood as much as sound.
10. B	Small and tiny are synonyms — tiny is just more intense. The other three pairs are all antonyms (opposites). Students who don’t look closely may pick any familiar pair.
