

Academic Words That Signal Contrast, Addition, and Logical Relationships

Name: _____

Date: _____

Score: _____ / 10

Quick Review

Strong writers use academic transition words to signal how ideas connect. Addition: furthermore, moreover, in addition. Contrast: however, on the other hand, in contrast, nevertheless. Cause/effect: therefore, consequently, as a result. Comparison: similarly, likewise. Picking the right one shows the reader EXACTLY how your ideas relate.

Explanations
1. D	Lin studied a lot, AND YET she felt unprepared — that's a contrast . Nevertheless = in spite of that . A signals cause/effect (so the next sentence would be a result); B signals comparison; C signals addition (would mean she added more studying).
2. B	The two ideas BOTH support healthy mouths — they ADD UP. In addition signals addition. A, C, and D all signal contrast, which would falsely make the second idea oppose the first.
3. A	Cause: flooded road. Effect: the bus could not run its route. Consequently = as a result . B signals comparison; C signals contrast; D signals addition.
4. C	The two groups feel OPPOSITE ways about the same suspense — that's a contrast. On the other hand introduces an opposing view. A signals addition; B signals cause/effect; D signals comparison.
5. B	Both sisters speak multiple languages — the second sentence COMPARES, showing the same kind of skill. Similarly signals comparison. A and D signal contrast; C signals cause/effect.
6. D	Long tradition vs. possible cancellation — a clear contrast. However signals contrast. A signals cause/effect; B signals addition; C signals comparison.
7. A	Two helpful actions stack up — addition. In addition signals addition. B and C signal contrast (would falsely set the actions against each other); D signals cause/effect.
8. C	Cause: enough money raised. Effect: construction starts. As a result signals cause/effect. A and D signal contrast; B signals comparison.
9. B	Both leafy greens have similar nutrition — the second sentence COMPARES. Likewise signals comparison. A signals cause/effect; C and D signal contrast.
10. A	Cause: lots of practice. Effect: she felt confident. Therefore signals cause/effect. B, C, and D all signal contrast, which would falsely make confidence oppose practicing.
