Quick Review

Figurative language and allusions reward readers who know the background. An allusion is a brief reference to a famous person, place, story, or event — usually from literature, the Bible, or mythology — that carries a compact meaning. She's a real Cassandra (Greek myth: a prophet whose true warnings were not believed). It was a Goliath of a task (biblical: huge and intimidating). He met his Waterloo (history: a decisive, final defeat). She's a Romeo (Shakespeare: a hopeless romantic). Other figures to know: simile (like, as), metaphor (direct comparison), hyperbole (huge exaggeration), personification (human traits for non-human things), oxymoron (two opposite words together, bittersweet), and paradox (a true statement that sounds contradictory).

PRACTICE

Identify the figure of speech, interpret the allusion, or explain its effect in context.

1. Read the sentence: When the budget meeting turned ugly, Mr. Hayes warned us all not to open a Pandora's box of old grievances.

The allusion to Pandora's box MOST LIKELY means —

- A. a beautifully decorated gift from Greek myth.
- B. an action that releases many troubles that cannot be taken back.
- C. a small wooden box that a Greek goddess used.
- D. a cure for jealousy and anger between people.

2. Read the sentence: I told my brother three times that his investment plan would fail, but he wouldn't listen. I felt like a Cassandra at the family dinner.

The allusion to Cassandra MOST LIKELY means —

- A. a person who only speaks at family gatherings.
- B. a character invented by a modern novelist.
- C. an ancient Greek city famous for its dinners.
- D. someone whose true warnings are not believed.

3. Read the sentence: After our team's six-game winning streak, the playoff against the state champions felt like a real Goliath of a challenge.

The allusion to Goliath MOST LIKELY means —

- A. a fair fight between equally matched players.
- B. a small but tricky obstacle to overcome.
- C. a huge, intimidating opponent or task.
- D. a coach known for shouting at his team.

4. Read the sentence: Once the press got hold of his old social-media posts, the senator knew he had met his Waterloo.

The allusion to Waterloo MOST LIKELY means —

- A. a final, decisive defeat that he cannot recover from.
- B. a long vacation by a lake in Europe.
- C. a battle in which he is sure to win.
- D. a famous song from the 1970s.

5. Read this sentence from a poem: The angry storm hurled rain against the windows and shouted across the rooftops all night.

What is the writer's MOST LIKELY purpose in personifying the storm?

- A. to give a precise weather-forecast reading.
- B. to argue that storms are scientifically dangerous.
- C. to make the storm feel alive and threatening, increasing the suspense of the scene.
- D. to make the line sound funny and lighthearted.

6. Which line is an example of oxymoron?

- A. The library was as silent as a tomb.
- B. Their parting was bittersweet — happy and sad at the same time.
- C. The wind whispered through the leaves.
- D. I've told you a million times to lock the door.

7. Read the sentence: Carlos is the Romeo of Lincoln Middle School: he wrote his crush a sonnet and left it taped to her locker.

The allusion to Romeo MOST LIKELY means —

- A. a hopelessly romantic young man.
- B. a dangerous swordsman from Verona.
- C. a poet who writes only in Italian.
- D. a character who dies at the end of the play.

8. Read this line from a speech: The senator was drowning in a sea of paperwork, every wave a fresh request from another committee.

The figure of speech is MOST CLEARLY a —

- A. personification, because the paperwork is given a human voice.
- B. hyperbole, because the speaker exaggerates a number.
- C. allusion, because the speech refers to a famous historical event.
- D. metaphor, because paperwork is described as a sea with waves.

9. Read the sentence: After three losing seasons, Coach Rivera's perfect playoff run felt like an Achilles heel moment in reverse — the one small thing that finally turned everything in his favor.

- (a) Identify the source of the allusion to Achilles heel (mythological, biblical, literary, or historical). (b) Explain in your own words what Achilles heel usually means. (c) Explain what the writer means by in reverse in this sentence.

10. For each line below, name the figure of speech (allusion, simile, metaphor, hyperbole, personification, oxymoron, or paradox) and explain in one sentence what it really means.

- (a) Don't open that email chain about the fundraiser — it's a real Pandora's box.
(b) The silence in the hospital waiting room was deafening.
(c) By the end of the meeting, my backpack weighed about a thousand tons.

Explanations

1. B	In Greek myth, Pandora opens a sealed jar and releases all the world's evils. The allusion means an action that releases many troubles that cannot be taken back . A picks the LITERAL gift, not the figurative meaning. C describes the box's physical look, not the warning the allusion carries. D reverses the meaning entirely (Pandora's box CAUSES trouble, doesn't cure it).
2. D	In Greek myth, Cassandra is cursed to prophesy true events that no one will believe. The allusion means someone whose true warnings are not believed , exactly the speaker's frustration. A invents a setting rule that isn't part of the myth. B drops the ancient source. C confuses the person with a place.
3. C	In the biblical story, Goliath is the giant Philistine warrior David must face. The allusion means a huge, intimidating opponent or task . A flattens the size difference that gives the allusion its meaning. B reverses the SIZE (Goliath is huge, not small). D invents a coach character that isn't in the story.
4. A	Waterloo alludes to Napoleon's final defeat in 1815 — the battle that ended his rule. The allusion means a final, decisive defeat that he cannot recover from . B takes the place name literally as a destination. C reverses the outcome (Napoleon lost, didn't win). D names a real song that borrows the allusion but doesn't carry the political meaning the sentence needs.
5. C	Personification gives non-human things emotion to deepen the mood. By making the storm angry and able to hurl and shout , the writer makes it feel alive and threatening , raising suspense. A reduces the line to a forecast. B reads it as a scientific argument, which a poem doesn't make. D misreads the tone (the line is tense, not playful).
6. B	An oxymoron joins two opposite ideas in one phrase. Bittersweet — explicitly defined as happy and sad at the same time — is the textbook example. A is a simile ( as silent as ). C is personification (the wind whispered ). D is hyperbole ( a million times ). All four are real figures of speech, but only one is an oxymoron.
7. A	Romeo, from Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet , is the model of the love-struck young man — a hopelessly romantic young man . B picks the LITERAL Romeo (a swordsman) but ignores the figurative meaning the sentence wants. C invents a constraint (Italian-only) that isn't part of the allusion. D picks the LITERAL fate of the character, not the figurative meaning of his name.
8. D	The line treats paperwork AS a sea — no like or as — a textbook metaphor . A is wrong because no human VOICE is given to the paper; metaphor doesn't require personification. B looks for a specific exaggerated NUMBER, but the line names no number. C claims a historical reference, but the line names no historical event or figure.

9.	Answer: (a) The allusion is mythological : in Greek myth, the warrior Achilles is invulnerable except for his heel, which becomes the cause of his death. (b) An Achilles heel usually means a single small weakness that can bring down an otherwise strong person or thing . (c) In reverse means the writer flips the usual meaning: instead of a small weakness causing a downfall, here a small detail (the perfect playoff run) causes a triumph — the same size of cause, but the opposite effect.
10.	Answer: (a) Allusion (Greek myth). The email chain will unleash a flood of troubles that cannot be taken back. (b) Oxymoron . The room was so quiet that the silence itself felt overwhelming; deafening and silence are opposites placed side by side. (c) Hyperbole . The backpack felt very heavy, but obviously not a literal thousand tons; the exaggeration shows the speaker's exhaustion.
